

WWW TUESDAY

Ready-to-Wear/Textiles

Fashion Scoops

MOMA MANGIA: It looks like dining at the refurbished Museum of Modern Art in Manhattan will be a major attraction. There is a choice of — count 'em — three Danny Meyers restaurants and the staffs are all wearing Yeohlee's designs. Judging from the enthusiasm during a tasting luncheon at MoMa on Friday, the day before the museum's official opening, one would think those long geometric-patterned aprons sashed with pockets and Asian-inspired cotton tunics were also works of art.

"What a great success," said Meyers, hugging the designer. "And to think everything was delivered on time!"

"What did you expect?" she replied.

Waiters, waitresses and museum staff came over to congratulate Yeohlee, noting how her designs worked in the museum's setting, and diners inquired about buying the richly optical aprons. There's a good possibility everything will become available in the MoMa Design Store. "You work it from your end, I'll work it from mine," Meyers said, moving on to his next hug.

MARKET BASKET

MOMA DIGS YEOHLEE: When the refurbished Museum of Modern Art reopens Saturday, staffers in its three restaurants will also be stylish — thanks to Yeohlee. The designer has whipped up uniforms for the Modern, Cafe 2 and Terrace 5, at the request of Danny Meyer's Union Square Hospitality Group, which runs the museum's canteens. Known for her minimalist styles in distinctive fabrics, Yeohlee has designed one-size-fits-all pieces like a slim-fitting jacket in charcoal and aprons with a holster-type pocket and curved hem.

